The Triple As: Austria, Australia, and Argentina

The red wines of Austria have always been a go-to of mine during the cooler seasons. Their approachability and affinity toward the scents of spices and comfort will leave you wanting more. The complexity of Australian wines has yet to be fully acknowledged in the US market. Frankly, I find them very appealing and somewhat misunderstood. The acute growing condition of Argentinian viticulture on the hills of the Andes Mountains is truly like no other in the world. The wine of Argentina has so much more to offer than merely being the synonym of Malbec.

But personal preference and rationale aside, the real intention of the Triple As, is simply why not. #3AsProxiChicago
